SLUNG! OPENS DOORS TO NEW SITE at www.SlungDoor.com

Slung Suspended Systems Corp., a custom crafter of high end, large and heavy exterior doors, opened their new website www.SlungDoor.com, as another step in the North American rollout which calls for 300 Slung! Registered agencies throughout North America. The new site is to serve both design professionals and the specially trained agencies who will perform what Slung! refers to as “Architectural Liaison”.

Naturally, SlungDoor.com will provide an avenue for homeowners, homebuilders and architects to learn about Slung™! systems and how they enhance design options in commercial and residential applications. However, the site was designed to serve visitors at a higher level.

“I do not know of another source offering the design community some of the tools found on the Slung! site including, a large and growing collection of over 100 links to current and relevant industry information, an extensive specialized glossary and most importantly, access to prompt CAD input and immediate “guesstimates”, said Ivan Surjanovic, President of iPower Strategy, the Vancouver based Internet Marketing firm who developed the site.

The site features a Virtual Reality Tour of an installed Slung! System, along with a photo gallery showcasing recent residential projects that incorporate the massive glass doors that are synonymous with Slung!.. Accompanying the images illustrating the look and feel of the movable glass wall systems is all the detailed product information that everyone from end users to major developers need to become familiar with the design and concepts behind Slung™! Suspended Systems.

The years of experience brought into the development process by iPower Strategy shaped a site where access to information and ease of navigation are the primary objectives. Accessibility to the site has not been overlooked with the site being linked into notable industry web pages.
